9-Line Target

SHACK! Congratulations on an impressive generation exercise ... the 509th knows how to put bombs on target.

News in Brief

Town hall meetings set

Two town hall meetings hosted by Col. Doug Raaberg, 509th Bomb Wing commander, begin at noon and 7 p.m. Tuesday at Mission's End. Free on-site childcare is available. For a childcare reservation, call the family support center at 687-7132.

Basewide garage sale set

A basewide garage sale begins at 8 a.m. Saturday. The garage sale takes places in base housing for members who live on base and in the Whiteman Elementary School parking lot for members who live off base.

Air show gate, parking info set

During the Wings over Whiteman air show June 14-15, the Arnold and LeMay gates will open at 9 a.m. for non-Department of Defense personnel only. DOD personnel should use the Spirit Gate, which will be operating under normal hours. Parking for DOD personnel will be available at the 509th Headquarters Building, the 509th Operations Support Squadron and the parking lot east of the base car wash. People who live on base are encouraged to walk to the air show whenever possible.

Gen. Hornburg praises war effort by ACC team

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (ACCNS) — I share General Jumper's appreciation of your incredible effort in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

I am extremely proud of every member of the Air Combat Command team. Your dedication and selfless service have instilled trust, confidence and hope for millions of peaceloving people around the world. You are a powerful force for freedom, and I am honored to serve as your commander.

As many of our people return home from Iraq, the war on terror still continues. Many American forces and coalition partners are still actively involved in combat operations around the world. We must continue to support them and recognize their selfless efforts in this global fight.

I also want to express my sincere appreciation to ACC families. They are our most vital source of support for our warfighters, and deserve to be recognized for their dedication and sacrifice. Thanks for all you do and may God bless you and your families.

OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM — Second Lt. Jason Gross, 509th Communications Squadron, has first lieutenant pinned on by Maj. Gen. Geoffrey Miller, Joint Task Force commanding general, at a deployed location. Gross works as a staff officer in the J6-Future Plans section at his deployed location. While deployed, Gross is responsible for planning communications infrastructure and support for all new buildings at the base.

COMMENTARY

Commander's Corner

By Col. Doug Raaberg

509th Bomb Wing Commander

GENEX KUDOS. Thanks to everyone for the dedicated work during last week's Generation Exercise. As usual, the 509th shacked the target! I know we all learned some valuable lessons — now is the time to capture them! Keep it up; we are ready for any mission the President might give us!

KEEP THINKING READI-NESS. More than 300 of our teammates are still deployed, but the good news is that each week brings more homecomings. Our wing made a tremendous effort with the surge of deployed personnel earlier this year, but that doesn't mean we can relax. Personal readiness is a constant requirement. The Air Force plans to get the AEF schedule back on track with the AEF Blue and AEF Silver cycles, but those cycles aren't tied to your normal AEF number. Bottom line: you need to be ready to go NOW, even if your normal rotation isn't until next year. I will host a town hall meeting Tuesday at noon and 7 p.m at Mission's End to discuss deployment issues — see you there! Keep checking the Whiteman

Spirit each week for tips to maintain your mission readiness ness.

FLOAT YOUR BOAT. The annual Build a Boat competition is at 6 p.m. tonight at Skelton Park. This is always a fun event and a good way to wind down a hard charging week. Thanks to the 509th Services Squadron for continuing to provide great ways for us to enjoy our down time!

GET READY TO SHOW YOUR SPIRIT. Our air-

GET READY TO SHOW YOUR SPIRIT. Our airshow is shaping up to be the best in base history. It's been almost three years since we had a chance to invite our friends and neighbors to visit our base and thank them for their constant support. We, the 509th Bomb Wing and 442nd Fighter Wing, are planning a great time for all June 14 and 15. We can use everyone's help. Is your work area "ready for inspection?" Are there things you need to do this week to make sure it is? Let's ensure our base reflects the great teams who live and work here!

SAFETY – THINK AHEAD. I can't stress enough how important it is to include safety in everything you do, on and off duty. Our mission leaves little room for error, and so do many off-duty activities. Every summer the military loses good men and women to vehicle mishaps and boating or swimming accidents. Many of these are alcohol-related. Bottom line: every safety mishap affects our mission!

FAMILY DAY. One more reminder: the Monday after the air show will be a Whiteman Family Day. Plan now to make the most of it – safely.

It's all about the mission ...

By Lt. Col. Dennis Shumaker 509th Maintenance Group Acting Commander

I had the pleasure of attending the Air Combat Command Maintenance Group Commanders Conference a few weeks ago, and a discussion I heard there made me think. A few people talked about the direction leadership was going and how what was being proposed would drive change and they didn't like it.

Then Brig. Gen. Michael Collings, ACC director of maintenance and logistics, stopped the discussion and reminded us it was not about leadership, our position, our organization or power. It was about the mission and how best to accomplish it.

Later that evening I thought about what the general said and how it can be used at all levels.

I attended the ACC Squadron Commanders Course a few years ago. The guest speaker was a vice president for the Chrysler Corporation before its bankruptcy in the late 70's and early 80's. He talked about change and how if a person or organization doesn't embrace it, they are on a road destined for failure. He talked about the lack of change and how his employees had lost the sight picture on the needs and demands of the customer.

In our case, it might be a little different: we should constantly look for better ways to execute the mission. Once again, better ways will drive change. We might have to make a change to deal with manpower and funding issues. We may make a major modification to a weapons system to adapt to a new threat.

So, how do you embrace change? How do you embrace new ideas and thoughts? I think proposed ideas require spirited discussion and testing, but when the time comes to make a decision, how do you make it? Do you embrace it or become defensive to protect territory, positions and power. If you do the latter, I suggest you change your sight picture.

Another issue is stability. Some people will argue that stability is necessary and will try to halt change. An organization that uses that as an argument is less stable than one that embraces change.

Do you think it's better to be one step ahead than behind? The answer is simple: change your organization from within before your environment forces you to change, creating instability. Successful organizations embrace change to ensure stability.

The bottom line is the mission and how to best to accomplish it.

People have great ideas and have proposed changes to processes at all levels. Listen to them with an open mind and don't put up the automatic defense shield even if it means a change to your entire organization. Remember, it's about the best way to execute the mission.

Integrity first: Reflections on safety

Lt. Col. Thomas Bussiere 509th Bomb Wing Chief of Safety

Recently, Whiteman has experienced several safety incidents where members of our team decided to drive under the influence of alcohol or disregard a lawful order and ride a motorcycle without the proper license or training. The individuals involved in these incidents were both experienced NCOs and young airmen. So far we have been extremely lucky. No military members or innocent civilians have been killed.

As we reflect on these events, let us not forget how we felt the evening of April 27th. On that night we learned of the loss of a member of our team to the hands of a driver under the influence of alcohol and drugs. As we struggle with how to convince our people this behavior is unacceptable, let's reflect for a moment on the Air Force's first core value: integrity.

Integrity is the foundation of leadership; it's the key to building a safe organization. Integrity is important because of the nature of our profession: the profession of arms. Integrity requires self-discipline. In uncertain and difficult situations, integrity is the compass that will consistently guide our airmen - on and off duty - along a path committed to appropriate behavior. Integrity creates trust. It's the one character trait that can't be compromised.

Air Force core values of Integrity First, Service Before Self and Excellence In All We Do are much more than minimum standards. They remind us what it takes to get the mission done and they inspire us to always do our very best on and off duty.

As military members, we're held to the highest standards. We're expected to be mature, productive members of society, to make sound decisions and live by our core values - regardless of our age or rank. We rely on each other to build and sustain Team Whiteman as the Air Force's most respected and feared combat force. When a member of our team is arrested for DUI, it's a significant hardship on the unit and has a dramatic impact on our mis-

Our conduct then, fulfilling our responsibilities and displaying professionalism at all times, is integrally connected to the success of our mission and should remain above reproach. We can tolerate mistakes and even learn valuable lessons from them as long as we always conduct ourselves professionally. Our mission necessitates more restrictive rules and standards.

From our most senior NCO or officer to our newest airman upon completion of the First-Term Airman's Center, we're obligated to conduct ourselves at all times so as to bring credit upon the Air Force, to fulfill our responsibilities and display professionalism, and to set the example for others to follow. Misconduct and criminal acts are intolerable for military members and counterproductive to accomplishing our mission.

The blood alcohol level of the six individuals arrested for DUI — .239, .148, .093, .020, .214 and .271 - drives home the point of how fortunate we are there were no fatalities. Driving under the influence, failure to obey a lawful order, dereliction of duty, underage drinking, and public intoxication have no place in our way of life and must be dealt with appropriately.

Let us never forget the impact driving under the influence of alcohol has on our military team and society. We all have friends who grew up without their father, mother or sibling because of the actions of a drunk driver. We all understand the hardship associated with losing a valuable member of our team. Let us all reflect on our most recent events and grow even more determined to stop this trend and keep on taking care of each other.

We must also continue to emphasize the positive and remain focused on the mission and the people who accomplish it. Despite our recent safety incidents, Team Whiteman is full of warriors who exhibit integrity in their actions and control over their lives. It is, however, the responsibility of each member of Team Whiteman to set the standard by which subordinates, peers and superiors can emulate. If we use integrity as our compass, together we'll get the mission done safely.

Missouri natives attend monthly BCC luncheon

Two Missouri natives attended the monthly base community council luncheon May 29. Rear Admiral Christopher Weaver, the commandant of the Naval District of Washington, is originally from Harrisonville, Mo., and Congressman Ike Skelton, of Missouri's 4th District, grew up in Lexington, Mo. Weaver served as the keynote speaker at the luncheon.

Windsor was the featured community and more than 150 people from the surrounding communities attended. Maj. Tim Dennison, 509th Maintenance Operations Squadron commander, is the liaison for Windsor.

Col. Doug Raaberg, 509th Bomb Wing commander, pointed out that the Navy protected the B-2 during Operation Iraqi Freedom. "Having Admiral Weaver here today is my small way of saying thank you," Raaberg Weaver is the 83rd commandant of the Naval District of Washington, the oldest continuously operated Navy installation in the nation.

He began his speech by explaining how great it was to be back in Missouri.

'By seeing everyone here, it proves the local communities are very proud of the heartland of our country," he said.

He said the current emphasis of the military is transformation.

We should continually make what we have better. Technology has made that possible. The war fighting capabilities have obviously been increasingly better at Whiteman through the B-2. We have learned from Operation Iraqi Freedom," said Weaver.

There are tremendous young airmen doing amazing things at Whiteman, said Weaver. "I spoke with a young airman that was maintaining a B-2 and I asked how long his training took. He simply said, '18 weeks.' I was shocked because I couldn't learn that in 18 years," he Weaver praised community members for their tremendous influence on today's youth. "From coaching little league to being a mentor, community members sculpt young airmen. You make a difference. Strong communities result in a strong relationship with the mil-

'This is a first-class installation! The leadership and community involvement make Whiteman a great place,' the admiral said.

Weaver closed by saying that it's chicken soup for his soul to be back.

"This is God's country and I'm always happy to come back to Missouri.

The next BCC event begins at 6:30 p.m. June 26 at Mission's End. Warrensburg will be the featured community and will be hosted by Lt. Col. Gavin Ketchen, 393rd Bomb Squadron commander. The guest speaker will be Col. Pamela Melroy, National Aeronautics and Space Administration astronaut. For a reservation, call public affairs by noon June 23 at 687-6151.

Whiteman Spirit Award

Tech. Sgt. Christopher Littrell 509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron

Tech. Sgt. Christopher Littrell, 509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, received the Whiteman Spirit Award from Col. Doug Raaberg, 509th Bomb Wing commander. Martha Dillenschneider, Osage Trail Middle School's Career Day coordinator, nominated Littrell for the award.

Littrell volunteered to be a speaker for Osage Middle School's career day. In 2002, more than 100 students attended his career day speech and more than 150 attended in 2003.

Littrell spent a full day with eighth grade students who are interested in careers in the military. During the sessions, he shared information about careers in the Air Force and then answered the student's questions. Faculty members who listened to Littrell speak about his job as a B-2 weapons load crew team chief said he spoke with pride and dedication.

"Littrell is a spirited public speaker and a positive role model," Dillenschneider said. "I'm sure he had a great influence on the students."

Personally speaking

Duty title: B-2 weapons load crew team chief Time on station: 1 year and 6 months Time in service: 9 years and 6 months

Hometown: Higbee, Mo.

Goals: To be a successful husband, father and make chief master sergeant.

Hobbies: Muscle cars, religious philosophy and hiking. Pet Peeves: People who don't know how to have a good time

Best thing about Whiteman: The privilege of loading the world's most technologically advanced bomber, the B-2.

What motivates your winning spirit? The exceptional job satisfaction due to the outstanding people I get to work with on a daily basis.

If you could change one thing about Whiteman, what would it be? Build an indoor swimming pool.

Submitting a Whiteman Spirit Award

Individuals are nominated from within their units or by customers impressed with the superior customer service provided by the nominee. If you know someone who has the Whiteman Spirit, send the nomination to the 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs Office, Bldg. 509, Suite 111, or e-mail whiteman.spirit@Whiteman.af.mil.

Did you know you can fill out a Department of Defense Form 2266, Hometown News Release, for a variety of accomplishments? For more details, call Master Sgt. Dee Ann Poole at 687-6125.

Attending or volunteering at wing events such as the Mission Success Celebration May 16 can help improve esprit de corps.

1st Sergeant's View

(Editor's note: The 1st Sergeant's View gives Whiteman first sergeants a chance to remind people of correct uniform wear, customs and courtesies, and proper military decorum. Each week, a different first sergeant will share their view.)

Esprit de corps, or team spirit, is enhanced by understanding our mission, our history, participating in squadron or wing activities, and recognizing we're part of the Air Force family, said Master Sgt. Mark Revel, 509th Bomb Wing and 509th Mission Support squadron first sergeant. Webster's dictionary defines esprit de corps as "a phrase used to denote the common spirit pervading the members of a body or association of persons. It implies sympathy, enthusiasm, devotion and jealous regard for the honor of the body as a whole." "What are you doing to increase the team spirit in your Squadron?" Revel asks. Revel said there are many things about the Air Force that improve team spirit such as speaking about the unique traits that come with serving in the Air Force with other squadron members. It can also come from volunteering or participating in special events such as helping with squadron events as picnics, luncheons, farewell parties and fund raisers.
